To us the parable simply brings home the whole teaching of this day: Whatever the outward circumstances of your life, devote yourselves to God. However little or much the stewardship of wealth intrusted to you by the world, make the best use of it for your eternal life. If Christ be your Master, follow His example. Pray for the spirit to think and do always such things as be rightful. V. We must not leave out of notice the First Evening Lesson. We behold Elijah sitting despondent under a juniper-tree in the wilderness, requesting for himself that he may die. What! had he, too, lost for a time the spirit to think and do what is right? Was he, too, halting between two opinions? Yes; like John the Baptist, his great antitype, in the castle of Machaerus, he was offended in God. Seeing that no great results followed that enthusiastic confession of God on Mount Carmel; that the covenant of God was still forsaken, His altars thrown down, and he himself seemingly left alone, --he was tempted to think his work had been in vain, and that there was no more left for him to do. He needed, therefore, that lesson which God so mercifully gave him--and gives us through him--that His kingdom in the world must ever be as a...
