To the right of this data was left a blank space for the investigators interpretation. On the first line of this grade sheet the median scores for that grade in rate and comprehension were placed. The scores of the individual pupils listed were to be compared with these medians, and the pupils condition and ability as a reader interpreted from such comparison. In the effort to make this interpretation it was found necessary to examine the papers themselves. This seemed advisable because the prescribed method of answering in some cases gave a pupil no credit for his answer, although the internal evidence showed that he comprehended the matter thoroughly. Some of the exercises, for instance, are to be handled by underscoring a certain word, while all other methods of indicating the answer are to be marked incorrect. The pupil who draws a circle around a word...
