At this place our Sailing Master, Capt. Elijah Bolles, an old salt, still in the brine, was shipped, as also were fresh milk, and the seven members of the Club to whom allusion has been made, who left Worcester by the steamboat train of 23 d. Here, also, reluctantly, we put ashore a citizen of Worcester, who had made the passage with us from Norwich, where he had done his business in the hope to make the entire trip with us, but was recalled by other engagements, having sundry proof sheets at this time running through the press, to which the owners imperatively demanded his personal attention. With much regret we bade him adieu, after solemnly toasting his health in lemonade. At 8 A.M. our anchor was weighed, and with wind about due north, we stood for Gardner s Bay, which anchorage ground we reached in about three hours. About this time several members of the Club took some lemonade. Fishing commenced. At 11.30 a loud shout announced the capture of the first fish - Brother Dennis having landed upon the deck a specimen of the shark species, y elept by the sailors dog-fish. In answer to our inquiries as to its eating qualities, Capt. Bolles pronounced it good! Opinion doubted: strong prejudice...
